

Week 1 GJ - Saaif Ahmed

Mon (9/14/20):

I am grateful for my friend Casey driving me to the Covid testing. Otherwise it would have been pretty hard. I appreciate Moe's for having Moe's Mondays so I don't need to cook dinner. I am grateful for Netflix so that my friends and I can watch shows together.

Tue (9/15/20):

I am grateful for the current weather in Troy. My room is typically hot so having something to balance that out makes sleeping and overall being in my room more comfortable. I am also grateful for Bixby, the Samsung Assistant. It makes menial tasks less menial because I can just do it with my voice.

Wed (9/16/20):

I am glad that my past-self chose the courses I did. Having a rest day on Wednesday is very helpful to catch up and get ahead. I am also grateful for my friends helping me prepare for Multivariable Quiz. It's been a while since I took a math course so their knowledge helps me a lot.

Thurs (9/17/20):

It is really great that my old roommate took Probability Theory before I took my probability course. He saved my tail for my Eprob homework by explaining some key ideas so that I could apply them to the homework. I am also grateful for pizza. Eating great pizza reminds me of my home in the city.

Fri (9/18/20):

I'm happy that oranges taste so good. Sweet oranges are one of the few snacks that actually lift my mood. To add to that I am happy that I bought sardines a week ago. Sardines, I have found, are a much tastier canned tuna, but only if you like fishy tastes. I am also glad that my work for the week is done meaning I can take this weekend for myself.
